

Joanne Gulliksen 8865 SW 43 Terrace, Miami, FL 33165

June 9, 1999

4433 '99 JUN 11 P2:48

Lyle D. Jaffee
Dockets Management
FDA/DHHS
12420 Parklawn Drive
Room 1-23
Rockville, MD 20857

Dear Mr. Jaffee,

Most of us city people don't know what happens on the farm where we get our foods and other animal by-products for consumer goods. I am not happy at all about the article I just read concerning the starvation of chickens to force molt them which causes many problems to the animal that gets passed along to the consumer.

I've spent the last six years in animal rescue. It is beyond me that Chicken Farms are allowed to continue this practice. Taking it a step further, to allow the use and consumption of a chicken that has oozing abscesses, internal hemorrhaging and god knows what else from the inhumane keeping of the animal. Great Britain and European Countries have outlawed Forced Molting. But not the good ole US of A.

I insist that the FDA/DHHS do something about it. I see two issues at stack. 1) Inhumane treatment of animals 2) Consumption of unhealthy animal products by humans.

I hope to hear that FDA is doing something to help protect the people.

Sinceely,

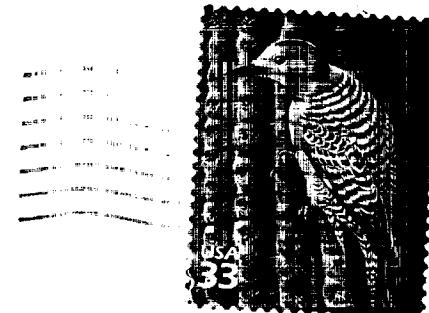

Joanne Gulliksen

981-0203

C 1613

JOANNE GÜLLIKSEN
8865 S.W. 43 Terr., Miami, FL. 33165

Lyle D. Jaffee
Dockets Management
FDA/DHHS
12420 Parklawn Drive, room 1-23
Rockville, MD 20857

11111111111111111111